

Dr. Līva Rotkale is a docent at the Faculty of History and Philosophy of the University of Latvia, and a researcher at the Department of Classical Philology of the University of Latvia, Faculty of Humanities. Her research interests are Aristotle's philosophy and its relation to contemporary analytic metaphysics, especially to mereology (a theory of parts and wholes). She has participated in many international conferences and has published several articles, including a cited paper in the journal "Metaphysics".

Dr. Andrei Balodis is a researcher and at the Institute of Philosophy and Sociology of the University of Latvia and a lecturer at the Latvian Academy of Culture, where he teaches courses in philosophy, ethics and aesthetics. He has published articles in Latvian and foreign academic journals and participated in several international scientific conferences, where he spoke mainly on the topic of time and memory in philosophy.

Dr. Māra Grīnfelde is a Senior Researcher at the University of Latvia Institute of Philosophy and Sociology and an lecturer at Rīga Stradiņš University, Department of Humanities. Her research interests include history of phenomenological philosophy, contemporary French phenomenology, phenomenology of medicine and the possibilities of philosophy's application to the health care.

Dr. Uldis Vēgnersis a Senior Researcher at the University of Latvia Institute of Philosophy and Sociology and an lecturer at Rīga Stradiņš University, Department of Humanities. His research interests lie in phenomenological philosophy: experience of time and body, medical phenomenology, and applications of phenomenology to health care.